

Hello SASS!

It's hard to know whether to say something like "time flies and it's August already" or to comment about how a year ago most of us did not expect to still be talking about COVID and masks and surges at this point in time.

Still, both of those are true - it's August already, surges and next waves of COVID are still in the news, and those of us with school-age grand kids are acutely aware of issues that still affect the start of a new school year.

August is often a time when grandparents have extra responsibilities tied to day care, and it's also a time when vacations often happen. So, you may be very busy!

But since very little is normal this year, we are happy to tell you we do have a little "normal" in our schedule. Hope to see you in August! Bring a friend! No matter what you decide regarding participation, do stay healthy!
